The Marshall County Tax Cases.

Mr. Lamb writes another letter to the Register touching the Marshall county tax compromise, the main feature of this case. In that case the law of 1860 to the county of the county tax compromise, the main feature of this case. In that case the law of 1860 to the county of the county tax compromise, the main feature of this case. In that case the law of 1860 to the county of tax compromise, the main feature of this case. In that case the law of 1800 which is an argument to show that the authorized the construction of a railroad the construction of a railroad to the grant to which is an argument to show that the United States Courts are not bound by the construction put by State Courts upon the Construction put by State Courts upon the Eridge Proprietors, and prima facts was an invasion of their franchises. If the railread bridge was a "bridge" within the meaning of the law of 1790, it was an invasion of the chartered law of 1790, it was an invasion of the chartered law of 1800.

Mr. Lamb relies, in proof of this position, upon the following quotation from a detailed by the law of 1800. The question before the court therefore was, as to the validity of the law of 1800. upon the following quotation from a decision of the Supreme Court:

was, as to the radicity of the law of 1860. It is true that the question of the validity of the law of 1860. It is true that the question of the validity of the law of 1860, depended on the construction of the law of 1700. But nevertheless the matter upon which the jurisdiction depended was the validity of the law of 1800. The State Court held it valid, and the Bridge Proprietors claimed that the court had erred in an holding, and that they were thereby "It has been contended that the con-struction given to these acts of assembly by the State Courts ought to be regarded laws of the State, and that this Court also holding, and that they were thereby deprived of their chartered rights which

"But this rule of interpretation is con-tined to ordinary acts of legislation, and does not extend to the contracts of the State, although they should be made in the form of a law. For it would be imthe form of a law. For it would be im-possible for this court to exercise any ap-pellate power in a case of this kind, unless it were at liberty to interpret for itself the instrument relied on as the contract be-tween the parties. It must necessarily de-cide whether the words used are words of contract, and what are their true mean-ing layers the ear descriptor whether the in the State Court, that the Acts of the Legislature of West Virginia imposing taxes upon the property of railroads, are in conflict with the charter of the company, and therefore invalid. It discusses the "true construction" of various provisions of its charter, and complains that the ing, before it can determine whether the obligation the instrument created has or has not been impaired by the law com-

ions of its charter, and complains that th This is all very clear; but Mr. LAMB acts of the defendants in assessing and This is all very clear; but Mr. LAMB has taken the trouble to prove what there is no dispute about, while he leaves the real point of controversy untouched. The language of the court here quoted shows for itself that it was applied to a case where a subsequent law was alleged to be in violation of a previous charter contract. The question to be determined was whether the contract had been thus violated, and to the determination of this question it was necessary for the court to construct the charter or contruct had the hard and to the determination of this question it was necessary for the court to construct the charter or contract.

But the Marshall county case is differ-

But the Marshall county case is different. The law under which it arose was not in conflict with the Company's clarter and it is not so claimed. It expressly construction of the charter of the company rounds that the property exempt from taxation by the charter of the Company it. shall not be assessed or taxed. There was shall not be assessed or taxed. There was therefore no violation of contract, nor any claim of any, which would require the decision of the Supreme Court, as in the case quoted by Mr. LAMB. Whether the Company's property was exempt from taxation by its charter, was a question of fact, because it depended on whether the put revenues had exceeded six, per cent. fact, because it depended on whether the the State Court as to the vanding of any met revenues had exceeded six per cent. This question of fact was examined by the State courts and their decision upon it was that the revenues had exceeded six per cent, and that the property of the grant the cause, that the questions that were litigated in the case, were questions of law arising upon the construction of

It being established thus that the Company was liable to taxation, beyond the reach of legitimate appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, there remained the question, what kind they were liable to—nehat was meant by "general" taxation. The State Court held that this meant just such taxation as other property is subject to at the hands of the several authorities, State, county and municipal, invested with the taxing power. As there was no issue involving the impairing of a contract, it follows even upon Mr. Lamb's own admission of the rule, that the Supreme Court would have followed, as Mr. Stanton claims, the rul.

rule, that the Supreme Court would have "record, that the question must have been followed, as Mr. Stanton claims, the ruling of the State court in its construction of the work "general." To show what Mr. Lamn's own views were on this question of jurisdiction before this comprants.

Here it is perfectly clear from the record. tion of jurisdiction before this compromise was made, we quote from the brief and argument of himself and associate counsel in the case, filed (or to be filed) when the case was called on the 9th inst. :

submit, therefore, with entire commence, that this case must be dismissed for want of jurisdiction. But if the court should find that there is enough in the record to give this court jurisdiction; still the question for the court is upon the construction of the Virginia statute of March 6, 1847. The only ground upon which this court The only ground upon which this court can take jurisdiction of this cause is, that the State law imposing taxes inport the property of the tplaintiffs, is in configuration for the court is upon the construction of the United with the charter of the company, and therefore void, because in violation of that prevision of the Constitution of, the United States which prohibits any State from passing any law impairing the oligation of contracts. The law mader which the taxes enjoined in this case were assessed, was passed December 3, 1863, and will be found in the Acts of that year, p. 165. The 52d section of that Act which requires Railroad companies to report thair struction given to a statute itself; in the case of Leffingwell to Warren, 2 man and the court so the United States. The contracts of the Act which requires Railroad companies to report thair struction given to a statute itself; in the case of Leffingwell to Warren, 2 man and the court so the United States as the text of the statute itself; in the contracts. The oad section of that Act which requires Ralicoad companies to report their property ior taxation, provides that, "The property exempt from taxation by the charter of any such company, shall not be assessed." How this law can be held in-"Stack, bos, the court say: I'me con-struction given to a statute of n State by "the highest judicial tribunal of such "State is regarded as a part of the statute "and is as binding on the courts of the "United States as the text. comprehension.

It is perfectly clear therefore, that the question before the court, is not as to the validity of the law of 1863, imposing taxes on Railroad companies, but upon the construction of the law of 1847, amending the charter of the Railroad company.

the charter of the Company, passes our comprehension.

It is perfectly clear therefore, that the question before the court, is not as to the question before the court, is not as to the sealistic of the law of 1874, mending the charter of the Railroad company. There is no question in the whole range of the jurisprudence of the United States, that has been more frequently before this court, or more theroughly discussed and considered by the court, than the question of the appellate jurisdiction of this court or more theroughly discussed and considered by the court, than the question of the appellate jurisdiction of the fact that the question of any question a rising upon the construction of a State law. To give this court cannot take jurisdiction of any question is an act of incorporation under which vested rights may have been acquired, the rails is different.
